Congressman Dale's aversion to appearing on the public platform with his two opposing candidates has not been explained. Is he afraid to meet them in joint debate? Or does he reckon on them too lightly?

Editor Otto R. Bennett of the Manchester Journal has been "drafted" at the last minute as a candidate for town representative. Editor Bennett is an enthusiastic boomer for Manchester and he would have the interests of the town at heart were he to be sent to Montpelier.

Germany turns down an invitation to participate in the Russian soviet-Poland war and in the soviet-western Europe war that is said to be in the making. Germany, let it be remembered, prefers to participate in a war which she starts herself—none of your joint affairs.

The Democrats of Vermont appear to be somewhat firmly attached to the old caucus system of nominating town representatives, judging by the small number of Democratic candidates filed in the cities and towns. That failure does not, of course, prevent the Democrats from getting together and nominating a man to be voted for at the election in November, although the lateness of the action may serve as a sort of handicap.

At least two members of the faculty at Norwich university are candidates to go to the Vermont legislature next January, one being a candidate for state senator and the other seeking to represent Northfield in the House. There is no reason why an educator should not be a good legislator, but one is inclined to wonder how the university could get along without two of its professors in the midst of the college year. Perhaps arrangements have been made for that contingency.

The Brattleboro Reformer claims to have information that a newly enfranchised woman residing in a central Vermont village wants a younger man than Uncle Sam to run for governor. Says the contemporary:

Sister Caroline —, one of the newly enfranchised women who lives in a bustling central Vermont village, in discussing the political situation the other day, stated that in her opinion "they" better get someone besides Uncle Sam to run the U. S. A. as he has had the job a long time and she thought "they" should elect a young man to take his place.

The reader will note that the new voter was quick to pick up the arguments advanced by mere man now and then, although she may have been slightly mixed about the man who holds the reins. Then, again, perhaps the story is a cruel libel against woman in general.

THE POLITICAL HANGERS-ON.

The Burlington News ought to have put under its joke column the statement that "Mr. Emery feels confident that the ring of men expecting jobs can swing votes enough to put him over a winner," for the statement provokes a laugh from any who knows the make-up of some of the support being accorded the other candidates for governor. As a matter of fact, Emery has fewer of the party hangers-on attached to his cause than at least two of the other candidates, including Babbitt, the man supported by the Burlington News. Mr. Emery is getting most of his support from the people who are closely allied with the political game as it is played in Vermont and who are supporting Mr. Emery with no thought of after-reward for themselves in the shape of office or anything else. The Newport man's campaign may have lacked some of the blare and fanfare of the other candidates for the reason that he has few of the professional claqueur in his following; but when it comes to the counting of the votes in the September 14 primary it will be found that the quiet thought of the state has been directed toward Mr. Emery in great measure.

Certainly a man can deny himself and save his money: he not only has the respect of his neighbors but he increases his own self respect.

BRIGHT, HAPPY HOMES ALL OVER

Have Beautiful CONGOLEUM Rugs All Over The House

Right here in town we are selling the prettiest and most practical, low-priced floor coverings on the market. You will be especially pleased with the unusual beauty of the Congoleum Art-Rug patterns. This is a new line altogether in addition to the regular designs.

All Congoleum Rugs are beautiful both in design and coloring. They are wonderfully practical, being washable, waterproof and sanitary. They never gather dirt under them, because they lie flat without tacking. Even a romping child cannot "kick up" the edges.
